COURSE DESCRIPTION

This introductory course is a combination of public speaking and communication theories—ranging from interpersonal to mass/social media. The course will focus on developing public speaking skills and on providing students with the knowledge necessary to better identify the processes involved communicative exchanges in their own lives. This includes how to analyze the various processes and choices people make when encoding/decoding messages—how we, not only interpret meanings, but respond in appropriate and effective ways.

Students will practice developing and organizing outlines, researching and assess credible sources, and performing their own crafted speeches. Public speaking presentations will include an introduction, interview, informative and persuasive speeches. Students will also practice assess public speeches and offer peer reviews of colleague's presentations. By assessing other speeches and speaker's, it will help us to better identify and become more familiar with the various elements of speaking making. This, in turn, can help us improve upon our own public presentations.

In addition, students will survey several communication theories, such as, rhetoric, intrapersonal and interpersonal communication, nonverbal communication, intercultural communication, small group communication, and mass/social media. How communication practices contribute to the construction of meaning, relationships, culture, and society will also be explored.

Required Textbooks:

Engleberg, Daily & Ward, Field Guide to Speaking, W.W. Norton, 2025.

Sampson, Cynthia, Fundamentals of Communication, Louisiana Library Network, 2022.
